BETRAYAL No. 1

Britain goes on paying EEC danegeld

Mrs. THATCHER
Tamely surrendered

AFTER MUCH huff and puff about the Government's resolve to achieve a reduction in Britain's payments towards the EEC Budget, no such reduction has been obtained. Mrs. Thatcher has returned empty handed from the Brussels conference at which the Government proclaimed it was going to get 'justice' for Britain over the payments. We still have to pay a regular sum of money into EEC funds which is far larger than those paid by France and Italy, two nations of similar size to Britain, and larger as a proportion of gross national product than that of West Germany. And, in contrast to the Germans, we do not get compensation for this by enjoying a large trading surplus with the EEC. Currently, Britain loses £1,140 million in trade annually to the community. For us, Europe is a loss.

BETRAYAL No. 2

Thousands of dairy farmers face ruin

THE COMMON MARKET bureaucrats have recently ordered British farmers to cut milk production by 7 per-cent, which amounts to 200 million gallons of milk less every year.

It is estimated that will lead to the slaughter of half a million British dairy cattle and the ruin of 10,000 dairy farmers in this country.

This is all because the EEC happens to be producing a large milk surplus.

The crazy thing about the whole affair is that Britain itself does not have a surplus but imports huge quantities of dairy products from EEC countries. We could keep our cattle and maintain in business the farmers threatened with ruin by selling their products in this country in preference to what we now import. But as long as we are in the EEC this is not allowed!

BLACKS ON LOOTING RAMPAGE

BRITAIN is experiencing a massive outbreak of violent crime which is being deliberately concealed from the majority of the general public because news of it is being mostly kept out of the national papers and radio and TV reports. Occasionally the crimes in question make the local press when they are too big and horrific to hide completely, and it is only in that way that we get to hear of them.

Why this national news cover-up? Very simple. In the majority of cases, it is because the crimes are committed by Blacks, and the powers that be consider it not to be good for the people to hear too much about black crime, as that might be bad for 'race relations'.

One such instance has been in Wolverhampton, a town with a heavy concentration of coloured immigrants. On this page we reproduce a front-page headline from the local Express and Star which reports an orgy of shoplifting and looting in the town by a 30-strong gang of youths. Later on in the report, in the small print, which we also reproduce here, it is admitted that the gang is comprised of West Indians.

Assistants helpless after 30 youths swoop

MOB TERROR AS SHOPS PLUNDERED

TRADERS TODAY demanded police protection against a mob of youths who are swooping on Wolverhampton stores in highly organised shoplift raids.

Chief Inspector David Thursfield said the gang were West Indian youths, some of school age. Shops in Dudley Street, Victoria Street, Wulfrun Streete and Cleveland Street were targets for the gang.

The practice of the gang has been to roam around central shopping areas in Wolverhampton terrorising shopkeepers and helping themselves to large quantities of expensive and valuable goods while the shopkeepers just have to look on helplessly. Said one of them of the gang: "They do not seem to care if we phone the police. They just carry on with what they're doing." This seems to indicate that the black gangsters are confident that there will be little or no police action to protect the shopkeepers. Have the Wolverhampton police, as with the police in other areas, been ordered to go easy on black criminals, again in the cause of 'race relations'?

Such police action as there has been seems to have been limited to patrolling local streets in order to prevent the Blacks from forming into groups large enough to be intimidating. This, however, does not appear to have been very successful and once the Blacks have banded together into gang formation the police seem indisposed to use the force necessary to break them up, let alone arrest them. Almost certainly, the police themselves do not like this kid-gloves approach but they are obliged to use it in compliance with instructions from 'high up' – probably the Home Office. This is what we have been told confidentially by a police officer from another area affected by black crime, and it is likely that it is the case in Wolverhampton also.

In race riot-torn Liverpool the picture of black crime is no different. After the violence in Toxteth area 3 years ago, the 'race relations' industry, with its squads of bleeding hearts and do-gooders, headed by the Government, made a beeline for the area, laden with hand-outs of every description for the Blacks in order to bribe them not to riot again or commit other crimes. Money was pumped into the area. Special recreation centres were built just for use by Blacks. Everything imaginable was done to coddle and pamper the immigrant community.

None of this has worked. Race trouble is still an almost daily occurrence in Liverpool and black crime is in fact on the increase. Mugging, for instance, has gone up by 30 percent on last year, according to police figures released recently. The city's streets have now been acknowledged by the police to be thoroughly dangerous. Liverpool police have declined to issue figures breaking reported muggings down into racial categories, but figures given out by the Metropolitan Police for the London area show an overwhelming preponderance of Blacks to have been involved. It is quite certain, bearing in mind the large numbers of black immigrants now to be found in Liverpool, that the same pattern exists in that city, and local newspaper reports of muggings certainly bear this out.

See our special feature, INNER LONDON: A MULTI-RACIAL HELL, on pages 3 and 4 of this issue.

ANARCHY IN ACTION

IF THERE is one thing that the current miners' strike demonstrates, it is the absence, under our liberal-democratic system, of anything which could properly be described as government.

The present Tory administration has elevated the liberal notion of the non-intervention of the state into a dogma. Over the five years or so of Mrs. Thatcher's premiership we have seen the introduction of a régime which behaves as though the British economy were functioning on another planet. International finance has been given a freer hand than ever before to strip down Britain's industry and technology and transfer investment to low-wage coloured countries and the communist bloc. At the same time our domestic market has been thrown wide open to virtually unlimited competition from these cheap producers while an unprecedented financial squeeze, involving record interest rates, has been allowed to cripple our basic industrial capacity.

As far as the Government is concerned, the consequences, in terms of mass unemployment or the availability of a strong industrial base should Britain ever again find herself in a position of isolation as in 1940, are not its affair.

Now a crisis has arisen in our coal industry. Our domestic market has, of course, been left wide open to penetration by imports of cheap coal from, among other places, eastern Europe. Under an indifferent government, unwilling to take any action to alter this situation, the National Coal Board has responded with a plan to close very large numbers of pits. Predictably the militant National Union of Miners' leadership has undertaken strike action.

Having allowed this chaos to develop in the first place, the Government permits it to continue. Nobody seems to have the power, under a liberal democratic dispensation, to impose order.

The Government appears not to be able to stop huge mobs of flying pickets from gathering outside pits to threaten those who wish to work, any more than it had the power or the will in the first place to protect such a vital national industry as coal or the wellbeing of those working in it. In this crisis the Government practises "non-intervention" as though it were a virtue. The power of the state is limited to using policemen to "contain" the worst excesses of disorder whilst union and management fight it out. A whole industry is torn apart – as has happened in the steel industry, the motor industry and the docks. And in the meantime worker is set against employer, worker against worker, worker against policeman, Briton against Briton, as our nation faces a hostile world.

Industrial relations are not alone in being treated as an area in which individuals are left

THE BUDGET

THE CHANCELLOR MISSES THE POINT

CHANCELLOR LAWSON

GREAT CHEERS have gone up greeting the news about the increase in the married man's and also the single person's allowance, thus taking many people out of the income tax bracket. Whilst we would agree that this reduction in income tax will be welcomed by most people, what is ignored is the fact that this does not even keep up with inflation when considered over the last ten years. Don't forget there was that year when the government simply failed to increase personal allowances, which undoubtedly has now given the scope to increase them more than the norm this year. A touch of how lovely it is when you actually stop hitting your head against a brick wall!

You could be forgiven if you gained the impression that the government was actually giving away more than it was taking. The reality is rather different. The basic shift in taxation continues as it has been doing for many years, particularly since the Conservatives came to office in 1979. It is a shift from direct to indirect taxation. The facts of the matter are that the overall burden of taxation will continue to increase. What is involved is a sleight of hand, making it appear that you actually have more money so that you can then elect to spend the money where you want to, perhaps forgetting that where you are spending it is now more heavily taxed than ever before!

With a policy of more indirect tax, the government can quietly sit back and make it appear that they are giving more tax cuts because indirect taxation, such as Value Added Tax, is all related to the prices of goods and services and with inflation the government's revenue automatically increases. It is this aspect of taxation which needs to be brought out more. For instance, if all prices in the shops and garages would show the price of the product and then, as a separate item, the tax, such as Excise Tax on petrol and then Value Added Tax, people would get a starker picture of the realities of taxation.

HELPING THE BANKS

Great play has been made about the attempts to control the money supply. However, we should note that in the Chancellor's speech in the House of Commons he made it quite clear that his policies were to encourage companies to borrow from the banks. He said: "Companies thus have a clear incentive to finance themselves through borrowing, in particular bank borrowing, rather than by raising equity capital." No doubt the banks will be delighted with this emphasis, whilst at the same time it will add to the money supply.

Whilst all the cheering is going on about the various aspects of tax reduction, which are of course all to be welcomed, even if it is only a matter of getting some of our own money back, what is not to be found in the budget speech is emphasis upon the manner in which other revenue is being obtained by forcing the price of gas and electricity up beyond the commercial requirements of those industries. This is another form of hidden taxation, controlled by the government, which has been started by the Conservative government and continues remorselessly even overriding the objections of the heads of those industries.

THE BANKING WORLD
Hugely benefitted from Lawson's entreaty to borrow

THE DEFICIT–INCREASING THE NATIONAL DEBT

A feature of modern society is to call anything by other than its proper name. For instance, in the budget we see reference to the public sector borrowing requirement, usually referred to briefly as PSBR. It is not frankly stated as being the deficit which is made up through borrowing. This needs to be far more starkly stated than it is. Here we see the essential feature of the budget, and where it is an exercise in missing the point. Chancellors, year after year, do nothing but juggle the figures, attempting to close loopholes in one place whilst appearing generous in others. What they never do is attempt to deal with the real issue. Once again, this budget shows a deficit and the deficit is estimated at £7.25 billion. That is nearly £520 per family of four. If we ran our own personal affairs on this basis, it would be criticised as highly irresponsible. This constant deficit is added to the constantly growing national debt, and continually growing national debt interest charges, all of which finish up in taxation. Under current policies the only way that we get out of debt is to borrow more the next time!

How then, it may be asked, do we get out of this dilemma and attempt to make the figures work out at all? The government's own Green Paper attempts to deal with this subject. It is in fact based upon the assumption of economic growth (that is producing more and more goods each year) and in particular exporting more goods than we import. The latter is quite often referred to in terms of Britain being more efficient. The reality is that this form of international trade must produce international friction, which is of course what we see in the world today. The arguments inside the Common Market are only a small aspect of it.

Once again, what is required is a policy that not only gives progressively more and more tax relief, but attacks the real problem of debt finance. We need to get away completely from introducing all money as an interest-bearing debt. It is quite possible to do this if there is the political will. However, the political will can only be found if there is sufficient pressure from the grass roots. In the meantime, until such time as that political will is forced on those in government, individuals can only attempt to survive by keeping out of debt and not being seduced by Chancellors of the Exchequer who encourage them to go into debt more easily.

A feature of the budget was, of course, that whilst there were aspirations about creating more jobs, there was no talk about a substantial reduction in the unemployed. Whilst in many respects the number of unemployed reflects the success of automation, it does not solve the problem of the misery of economic difficulties imposed upon those who are unemployed. At the same time as solving the problem of debt finance, it is also necessary in this technological age to find new ways of getting increased purchasing power into the hands of the members of the community, other than through the wage, salary and dividend mechanisms. This is the essential challenge which is not even being looked at: yet another aspect which makes the budget an exercise in missing the point.

INNER LONDON: A MULTI-RACIAL HELL

We take a look at the nation's capital in 'Anti-Racist Year'

AS THE Greater London Council declares 1984 "Anti-Racism Year", we focus on the hell of multi-racial squalor, violence and fear over which this extreme left-wing local authority presides.

The atmosphere of the inner London boroughs is best indicated by the recent attack near the multi-racial Pepys Estate in Deptford on a half-blind 15-year-old white girl by a gang of black youths who threw acid over her shouting, "White bastards!" as they did so. No motive of robbery in this case and police are treating the attack as a "racial incident".

When the GLC talks of "anti-racism" it has in mind only the "racism" of Whites against Blacks, yet this piece of sadistic viciousness reveals an open race hatred and contempt on the part of certain Blacks against Whites.

In general, the mugging attacks, rapes and riots, which have increasingly become a regular feature of life in inner London, would seem to indicate the same thing. The most recent Metropolitan Police figures revealing the racial identity of muggers show 63 per-cent to have been black in those cases where definite identification was obtained. Allowing the figure of 22 per-cent given for muggings by Whites as being correct, with the remaining percentage either committed by mixed gangs or by persons of unidentified race, it is reasonable to suggest that in excess of 70 per-cent of these crimes are the work of Blacks.

Reports in the local newspapers of the inner London boroughs give a powerful impression that the vast majority of victims are white. This has been corroborated by figures from official sources issued since the mid-seventies, according to which between 80 and 90 per-cent are white.

Such assaults have become steadily more atrocious with the passage of time and the absence of effective official response or evidence of official will to maintain law and order. Regardless of age or sex, no member of the white population is immune. Young children and babies in their prams have been slashed with knives and razors as their mothers have been robbed.

The presence of this ever-increasing anarchic element threatens the whole future of the British people. The very high birthrate of the black population as compared with our own, together with the political exploitation of that population, both by the establishment parties and by leftist revolutionary subversives, menace the very existence of our people.

Women, including old women in their seventies and eighties, have been raped by black criminals in some of the vilest sexual attacks ever recorded.

Today no white man or woman walks the streets without the nagging fear of imminent violence.

A way of life has thus been imported which is typical of city life in Africa, the Caribbean and the black ghettoes of American cities rather than Britain.

Reds use Blacks as revolutionary weapon

"The British will never make their own revolution; foreigners will have to make it for them" – Karl Marx

A WHOLE CLASS of professional communist revolutionaries has crawled from the sewers of society precisely to take advantage of the presence of coloured aliens in Britain.

These elements hold effective political power over London today.

They set themselves up as "friends of the working class", but in fact neither they nor their predominantly coloured immigrant power-base have much in common with most of the white working class of inner London.

They include such people as Livingstone and his GLC cronies, the rabble of renegade middle-class red squatters, queers, assorted aliens, mongrels and human refuse that controls such authorities as Hackney or the "Soviet Republic" of Islington (where the Red Flag flies over the Town Hall and a bust of Lenin overlooks the foyer); and the "entryists" who have the whip hand in local Labour Party organisations, including such individuals as Tariq Ali, the veteran Pakistani Marxist agitator who was recently admitted to Hornsey Labour Party.

The coalition of human scum which has thus emerged looks for support to a constituency very different from the white working class.

Black and Asian immigrant masses provide them with the natural means. Communists know that the revolution at which they aim has never succeeded in any racially uniform white nation. Every European country threatened by Bolshevism up until the Second World War defeated the threat. The alien minorities introduced into Britain within the past generation or so provide masses which can be formed into mobs on the streets, or voting blocs to keep extreme left elements in power.

The long-term calculation of London's reds is that the demographic pressure of a high non-white birthrate coupled with the physical and psychological pressure of a politically organised, united and aggressive black population will displace and drive out the Whites. Britain's capital city, especially its politically important inner suburbs adjacent to the centres of national government, would in such circumstances remain under the permanent control of left-wing extremists. The only Whites likely to remain would be the dregs of their population, which would be naturally inclined to mix and interbreed with Blacks.

COMMUNIST-ORGANISED MARCH
Reds manipulate coloured minority groups and white liberals in order to stir up rebellion over the race issue.

These red vermin regard as their enemy to be destroyed all the values which make for real progress – law and order, self-discipline, hard work and enterprise, creative intelligence, patriotic pride, pride in self and pride in race and kind – the values in which the white man has throughout history been pre-eminent. Their communist revolution is in fact a mutiny of inferiors.

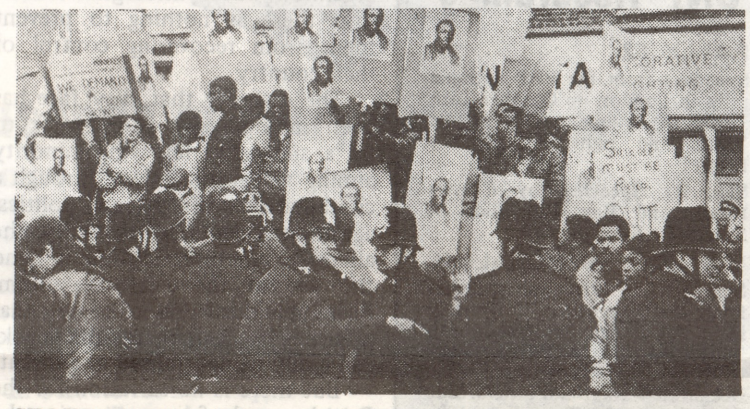
Hence the use of devices such as "Anti-Racism Year" whose purpose is to agitate Blacks, build up their sense of solidarity and anti-white hostility by means of "anti-racist" propaganda, and attempt to break the will of Whites.

The violent proclivities of Blacks, revealed repeatedly in crime statistics, have been and will be increasingly harnessed for left-wing political ends.

RED AND BLACK GANGSTERS FORM MOBS TO ATTACK POLICE

SINCE the Brixton riots of 1981 in which the local squatters who provide the activists of red gangster organisations were heavily involved, mob violence has been used increasingly to undermine law and order in general and the police in particular.

Bodies such as the GLC and the red-controlled local councils of the inner London boroughs have used ratepayers' money to sustain a steady stream of pro-black, anti-white "anti-racist" propaganda. With increasing aggression and arrogance, agitators from such organisations as the Socialist Workers' Party and the Revolutionary Communist Party, front organisations like "Workers Against Racism" (WAR) and "Black Power" groups like Darcus Howe's Brixton-based "Race Today Collective" have worked to whip up campaigns which have led to violent disorder on the streets. An atmosphere of terror and fear has come to pervade inner London today.



STOKE NEWINGTON: BLACKS DEMONSTRATE AGAINST POLICE. Thousands of Blacks, whipped up by Communist agitators, tried to exploit the death of a deranged West Indian, Colin Roach, as a means of undermining London's police force.

BELIEF IN TERROR

Left-wing revolutionaries such as these know that terror is necessary for the success of communist revolution and that inflamed mobs are necessary to enforce that terror. The black population has been seen as by far the best source of suitably disaffected elements available for revolutionary assaults against the white society whose destruction is intended.

In common with many revolutionary agitators, Darcus Howe has indicated the desired direction of the process. Blacks are told that they must form a common front with the IRA in its fight against "British Imperialism" and "oppression".

The principal target has been the police force. No left-wing revolution can succeed without the demoralisation of the forces of law and order. Thus Blacks in particular have been deliberately brought to believe that they are the victims of "racist oppression" from the police and that violence against police is justified. There has been an endless succession, in black areas of London, of assaults by gangs on police officers attempting to arrest criminals.

Calculating that Blacks are excitable and gullible and can be induced to believe anything, however preposterous, communist agitators have whipped them into hysteria over a number of manufactured "issues".

In early 1982, following a fire at an all-night party in a Deptford house which caused the deaths of several Blacks, Darcus Howe's "Race Today Collective", which operates from Shakespeare Road, Brixton, put the word around among South London Blacks that the fire had been caused by arsonists belonging to a "white racist" organisation. The police, it was claimed, were "covering up" the truth in failing to make an arrest. They were denounced as "racist".

When the inquest into the deaths was held, the Coroner's Court was invaded by rowdy Blacks who had come to intimidate the Coroner into delivering a verdict that arson by "racists" was to blame. The desired verdict was not forthcoming.

A huge demonstration, numbering thousands of Blacks, was organised to march from South to Central London in protest at this "denial of justice". A police cordon which had been set up at Blackfriars Bridge, presumably to bar the way into Central London, in the event merely gave way, allowing this enormous mob to pour across the Thames. Erupting into the centre of London, Blacks from the march column proceeded to mug members of the public in the streets and on buses.

It now appears that the principal suspect in the Deptford Fire case is in fact a Black.

Central London 1981: Huge mobs of Blacks run wild in the streets while demonstrating against police.

THE ROACH AFFAIR

At the beginning of 1983 it was reported that a young Black named Colin Roach had entered a police station at Stoke Newington in the East End of London and blown his brains out with a shotgun. Roach had a record of mental instability and had received psychiatric treatment for depression. Local left-wing agitators distributed leaflets among the black community claiming that "racist" police had murdered Colin Roach. A protest march demanding a public enquiry was held. During the course of the march gangs of Blacks broke away from the column to raid and plunder shops in Stoke Newington High Street. A picket was subsequently mounted outside the police station by young Blacks in IRA-style balaclavas.

No effort was made to remove the gang conducting the picket.

When red-controlled Hackney Council (in whose area Stoke Newington is situated) discussed withholding payments of its statutory Police Grant, the Council Chamber was invaded by aggressive Blacks who were present to intimidate and silence the lone Councillor prepared to point out the illegality of what was proposed.

ESTABLISHMENT ATTEMPTS BIG COVER-UP

THE SOLE RESPONSE of the Establishment to the race problem it has created is suppression of the facts as far as is possible.

Establishment newspapers have frequently relegated news about the worst black excesses to an inch of column space on the inside pages. Television and radio coverage is virtually never given to muggings and other disorders for which Blacks are responsible.

The politicians of the established parties wash their hands of the consequences. In their public utterances they pretend that black violence is not really happening. Thus Roy Hattersley, a figure typical of the Labour Party establishment, described the figures issued by the Metropolitan Police showing the vast black overrepresentation among muggers, as "statistical garbage". According to Hattersley, the predominantly white victims of such attacks could not possibly know the race of their attackers!

Tory MP for North Ealing, Harry Greenway, himself a former headmaster, says that in inner London schools

Contd. overleaf

INNER LONDON: A MULTI-RACIAL HELL (Contd.)

"people must have equal treatment, whatever colour they are." Separateness, he says, could lead to an "explosion". He triumphantly claims that "children are losing an awareness of their colour as society becomes more fair-minded." "Sharpening divisions" is "dangerous". Thus the truth about racial differences in behaviour must be ignored. The seeming decline among young whites of a sense of their own racial identity and a corresponding will to survive is passed off by such establishment political hacks as the advent of "racial harmony" rather than the outcome of brainwashing and intimidation, as is in fact the case.

Underlying Greenway's statement is the attitude that the British people must be allowed to die quietly in order to avoid embarrassment to the decadent, cowardly, corrupt, vote-grubbing pygmies on the establishment gravy train.

In a recent speech at Nottingham Enoch Powell said that the present Government (as much as previous ones) has suppressed the truth about what he calls the dynamic process whereby an entrenched non-white population is transforming (or being used to transform) British society.

It would appear that, like all our other major parties, the Tory party, devoid of all real principle or idealism, full of cynicism and morally bankrupt, is incapable of even resisting, never mind reversing, this process. The politicians of these parties cannot counter disorder so they pretend to their electorates that there is no disorder!

Whites fight back

LEADING WHITE RESISTANCE BNP paper sellers man the London streets

THE BRITISH PEOPLE can break this reign of lies and teror. What is required is an intelligent political response.

Whites still have a large numerical majority. If they are united and organised under intelligent leadership there is nothing to prevent them from recovering control of their country.

The disorder that they face has been methodically brought about by a subversive left-wing minority aiming to capture power through a combination of street politics, agitation calculated to unify the aliens in our midst against us, and the use of the electoral system. Without the presence of that minority to lead them, the Blacks can easily be neutralised as a threat.

But there is no salvation for the British people from supporting the confidence trick of the Tory, Labour, Liberal and Social Democratic parties. Gutless, impotent and cynical, these parties "go along" with the chaos created by the black/red coalition, even to the extent of emasculating their own police force in face of the threat for fear of the stiff fight they might otherwise have to face.

It is a matter of simple observation that London, like Britain's other cities, continues to degenerate just the same, whichever of the old gang parties is in power. A new force is required.

The British National Party, the spearhead of an effective white counter-attack, is on the streets with the message of nationalism. The supreme law for us is the survival of the white man. A militant idealism based on that absolute first principle must govern the life of the British people.

Unless our people are brought to accept this, an appalling future awaits them and their descendants.

Muggings and riots, multi-racial slums and red squats need not represent that future. There is no "Black Power", only white weakness. The subversive political underworld of the left, which controls events for the moment, can be defeated under the leadership of the BNP.

RATEPAYERS' MONEY USED TO FINANCE MINORITY AGITATION

Current grants in ratepayers' money being disbursed by the GLC reveal clearly the political intentions and priorities of its controlling extreme left elements. The predominantly white, productive part of the population which keeps London working has little interest in projects such as the following, for which it pays dearly:—

★ Afro-Caribbean Cultural Centre	£ 15,930
★ Ahfiwe School	£ 4,710
★ Asian Social and Cultural Group	£ 150
★ Asian Community Action Group	£ 46,750
★ Consortium of Ethnic Minorities	£ 42,710
★ Council for Community Relations	£418,350

★ Rasta International	£ 6,000
★ South London Islamic Centre	£ 49,000
★ Asian Sheltered Residential Accommodation Furnishings	£ 7,000
★ Afro-Caribbean Education Resource Project — Phase II	£ 44,300
★ Development Officer, Health Services for Ethnic Communities	£ 10,165
Post for Investigation of Council Purchasing and Monopoly
★ Distribution of Afro-Caribbean Fruit and Vegetables	£ 15,000
★ Race Relations — Additional Staff	£ 32,000
★ Hair and Skin Care for Black Children	£ 3,500
★ Feasibility Study for Group Home for Black Elderly	£ 10,000
★ Racism Awareness Training	£ 2,500
★ Melting Pot Foundation for Young Blacks	£205,210
★ Unity of Afro-Caribbean People	£ 8,014
★ Southall Black Sisters	£ 25,338
★ Black Amalgamated Self-Help Co-op	£ 21,327
★ Rastafarian Advisory Centre	£ 77,835
★ Gay Switchboard	£ 1,900

★ Cultural Organisation for Black Radical Achievement	£ 43,337
★ Rastafarian Universal Zion	£ 25,000
★ Gay Bereavement Project	£ 375
★ Babies Against the Bomb	£ 1,600

So now we know that the Greater London Council regards us as milch-cows to finance the agitation of a red and black alliance against ourselves and to promote our own displacement by aliens.

to make their own decisions. Cant-ridden phrases about the "rights of the individual" in our "free society", much beloved of establishment politicians, are invoked to justify the abdication of political leadership throughout our national life. Everywhere anarchy has become a habit.

In reality what the British people instinctively wish for is government in the hands of a competent, responsible and identifiable political leadership standing above all sectional interests and with the power to IMPOSE its will on them in order to maintain an orderly, just, prosperous and efficient society.

It was this feeling which led so many of our people from all walks of life and all social backgrounds to respond in the way they did to such a politician as Enoch Powell, who seemed at one time to be a possible representative of that kind of authority. It was just such a feeling on which the present Prime Minister and her clique of public relations shysters have cynically traded to secure political office and advantage for themselves. The ludicrous Margaret Thatcher Personality Cult was fabricated for no other purpose.

Whatever the outcome of the miners' strike, it will at least expose the absurdity of such humbug.

In its own way this industrial dispute points up the need for a new order in the conduct of Britain's affairs.
